

5

8

12

MASSACHUSETTS WILDLIFE

Vol. LIII

No. 2

FEATURES

THE DIDEMNID MYSTERY 5

— Mary R. Carman & Lee S. Roscoe

A new (and so far unidentifiable) species has joined the host of exotic invertebrates that have successfully invaded our coastal marine environments ...

A BEAR ENCOUNTER 8

— Jeffrey J. Bradford

When a sow and cubs unexpectedly approaches the deer stand, even a seasoned hunter can be forgiven for getting a little nervous ...

WORLDS OF RED AND GRAY 12

— Peter G. Mirick

Familiar but ever mysterious, our two species of small wild canids display an extraordinary variety of interesting behaviors and abilities ...

GETTING GEESE OFF THE GRASS 30

— John Lebica

Keeping geese — or more specifically, their messy droppings — off the athletic fields proved a frustrating endeavor until a few coyotes were employed ...

Director's Editorial, 28

2002 Deer Harvest Statistics, 36

On the Cover: An adult male gray fox personifies the beauty and secretiveness for which this common native predator is known. To get this photo, Bill Byrne set up his blind about 70 feet from an active den on a rural farm. The foxes were always aware of his presence, and the male in particular frequently circled and occasionally barked at the blind. The animals put up with the attention for a week, then relocated to a more secluded site. The shot was taken at about 20 feet with a 500 mm lens and Fuji Provia 100F film.

Surfers!

Check out our website at www.masswildlife.org

Questions about your subscription?

Change of address?

Call toll free: 1 - 800 - 289 - 4778.

